Our centenary year comes to a close

On 1 July 2019 we commemorated our 100-year anniversary with a staff celebration and re-enactment of a 1919 board meeting. State Super (then known as the State Provident Fund Management Board) was launched at that board meeting at a momentous time in history, with the end of the Great War and the introduction of social programs for returning veterans.

Throughout the last 12 months we met with some of our centenarians, State Super members who were celebrating turning 100, and we showcased the stories of their amazing (and long!) lives in SuperViews, on our website and LinkedIn. Every member turning 100 throughout the year received a bouquet of flowers from us on their birthday. Some told us they enjoyed this gesture as much as the letter they received from the Queen.

Our 100-year birthday celebration culminated in a reception at the Mitchell Galleries at the State Library of New South Wales. Business partners, members, staff and media attended the event, including one very special guest member, Dr Elizabeth (Betty) Hall, one of our centenarians.

NSW Treasurer, the Hon. Dominic Perrottet, was guest speaker. He spoke warmly of the history of State Super and the lessons that can be learned about the very nature of public service, and the peace of mind that comes from a secure future.

State Super Academic Scholarships awarded

Another milestone during our anniversary year was the announcement of an important new initiative, the State Super Academic Scholarship. The aim of the program is to foster research in several priority areas to improve future retirement incomes.

We're pleased to confirm that two scholarships have now been awarded by the review panel to an Honours student from Macquarie University and a Masters student from the University of NSW.

More information will be published on their research progress in the coming months.

Responsible Investing offers super returns

At State Super, we focus on investing with you over the long-term of your retirement and we consider a range of risks that may impact your returns. One category of these risks is commonly referred to as ESG (environmental, social and governance).

In 2019, the Trustee Board approved a new Responsible Investment Policy which ensures we are able to continue effectively integrating ESG factors in the changing environment. Some of the ways we have integrated ESG risks include:

At State Super, we focus on investing with you over the long-term of your retirement and we consider a range of risks that may impact your returns.

- ▶ Climate scenario modelling: Scenario modelling is one way State Super can better understand the potential impact of, and prepare for, climate change. With the help of our advisors, State Super assessed the potential impact of climate change using different potential circumstances. These findings were reflected in the annual investment strategy review.
- ▶ Physical climate risk assessment: We also commissioned research on the physical risks of climate change. This assessment is based on the assets location and looked at the vulnerability of physical assets to risks such as floods, heat waves and cyclones. We initially undertook research in 2019 to identify potential vulnerabilities to State Super's unlisted property and infrastructure assets and extended this in 2020 to include an assessment of the vulnerability of the physical assets within State Super's listed equities portfolio. We plan to use these results to inform future investment and asset management decisions.
- ▶ Carbon footprint analysis: State Super implemented analysis to measure and monitor the carbon footprint of its listed equities portfolios for DC (Defined Contributions) Options. This will form part of the ongoing management of ESG risk.
- ▶ Voting: Voting is another way State Super communicates with the companies we invest in. For DC Options, we transitioned to internal voting by State Super, with voting based on the ACSI (Australian Council of Superannuation Investors) guidelines. Voting for Trustee Selection has been delegated to TCorp. The first combined voting activities report was published on the website on 20 July 2020 enabling members to see how we apply our voting principles.

Annual Member Satisfaction Survey – have your say

Our annual Member Satisfaction Survey is coming up and we will be contacting members by phone in November to have their say.

Thanks to everyone who participated and provided feedback in our last survey, which again gave us very positive results in all areas of service delivery when compared to the broader superannuation industry.

This research has become an integral part of our future planning and will continue to identify ways to improve the services we provide to you.

We also welcome your feedback at any time via our online form at www.statesuper.nsw.gov.au/help-centre/contact-us

Gaining perspective on a volatile year

The last 12 months have seen an almost unprecedented level of volatility. The first half of the financial year brought strong share markets, but that rapidly changed with the arrival of the Covid-19 virus. By mid-March, markets had suffered their sharpest fall in history. This sparked economic stimulus of unprecedented speed and magnitude by Governments globally, and together with central banks maintaining historically low interest rates, this drove an equally quick market recovery. By the end of the financial year markets were roughly back to where they were six months prior.

Thanks to State Super's down-side risk minimising strategies, our members have been well protected from the initial financial shock of the pandemic. In fact, we were one of the best performing super funds in the March quarter.

A different kind of crash

There are some significant differences between this pandemic related crash and the previous two crashes of 2001 and 2008. In terms of economic contractions, the current crisis is far greater in depth than the previous two, but paradoxically share markets have rebounded much more quickly this time.

This recovery can largely be attributed to the unprecedented speed and magnitude of stimulus measures implemented by governments and central banks, the gradual economic reopening and initial improvements in infection and death rates following a global 'lockdown', and the enormous focus on developing a vaccine. This saw a significant recovery in global shares and commodity prices between March and June. The US share market led the way on this front recovering most of its losses, whilst the Australian market finished further behind its financial year starting point.

"We were one of the best performing super funds in the March quarter."

This market resilience, however, may belie the significant ongoing challenges to economic growth, employment and business conditions. The extraordinary stimulus measures and wage support programs may be merely delaying the inevitable impacts on some businesses, that may not be able to recover or survive once the support programs taper off.

The Reserve Bank of Australia has cautioned that the uncertainty surrounding the impact of the virus may continue to be a drag on the economy for some time, as households and businesses exercise caution, lower their consumption and postpone their investment plans. Company profits and dividends on the whole will almost certainly be impacted and industries most acutely affected, such as transport, hospitality, entertainment and construction, may suffer an extended period of stagnation. The crisis may also accelerate structural changes to some sectors. For example, the surge in online shopping may eventuate in permanent changes to the shopping habits of many consumers, which will pose a major challenge for many retailers.

What is the expected outlook?

In terms of investment markets, short-term volatility is expected to continue.

There are significant headwinds for the global economy, most notably recovery in employment, business conditions, and economic activity, complicated by the risk of 'second waves' as economies try to gradually re-open. Rising geopolitical tensions, an uncertain US presidential election in November, and very high levels of debt are further hurdles. On the other hand, continued Government and Central Bank support, strong earnings growth for technology and other sectors positively impacted by the work-from-home regime, and a potential positive surprise on the vaccine front may continue to buoy markets.

Forecasting the economic outlook is therefore challenging. According to tentative Reserve Bank forecasts, GDP growth in Australia will likely end up around -5% for the 2020 calendar year with a return to positive growth by the end of 2021, but this forecast is heavily conditional upon how the pandemic tracks over the months to come.

State Super weathers the storm well

Our funds have benefited from an ongoing strategy known as “tail risk hedging”, which is implemented to protect against extreme market movements. State Super CEO, John Livanas, gave this insight into how this works in practice.

CEO John Livanas

John Livanas explained that “Traditionally, fund managers rely primarily on diversification strategies and active management as ways of managing risk. While we do employ those practices, we complement them with tail risk hedging to bolster our funds’ resilience against sudden catastrophic market downturns. This strategy results in some marginal cost to performance during normal conditions, but we firmly believe the added protection it gives to our members is well worth it. Our performance during this current crisis has certainly vindicated this approach”.

Another key factor in State Super’s ability to respond well to the pandemic is our emphasis on maintaining strong liquidity levels, as John explains. “Our fund has a relatively high proportion of older members with comparatively large balances. We know that as these members start retiring there will be significant withdrawals to be paid out. With that in mind, a core feature of our investment policy is to maintain substantial liquidity so that we are well positioned to meet our obligations.

With many of our members closing in on retirement age it is also important that we maintain a defensive skew on our investment strategy, so that market volatility does not negatively impact a member’s withdrawal at the time of their retirement. The combination of this defensive emphasis, with our robust liquidity and our tail risk hedging strategy means that our members can be very confident in our ability to weather the current storm”.

Introducing Aware Super - continuing an historic partnership

At State Super one of our five Member Beliefs is to help members maximise their benefit.

For 30 years, as a member of State Super, you and your family have been able to access a range of services with a professional financial planner from StatePlus, who are experts in your scheme.

In 2016, StatePlus was sold by State Super to First State Super, one of Australia's largest profit-to-member superannuation funds and one of the country's leading financial advice businesses, with over 200 financial planners, located across Australia. The combined group manages over $125 billion in retirement savings and the historical connection has meant that our investment beliefs are very closely aligned. They have helped thousands of people just like you to achieve their lifestyle goals, now and throughout retirement.

This heritage drives their culture of fairness, integrity and openness. As our trusted partner they act in the best interests of members to help maximise their State Super benefits, provide specialist retirement advice and implementation solutions.

Aware Super - a new name for First State Super and StatePlus

First State Super and StatePlus are changing their brand to Aware Super. They believe a single brand that's relevant across Australia, delivers the best value to their members and financial planning clients. They aim for one recognisable brand that is more cost-effective to build and support over time.

The name Aware Super was delivered following consultation with groups of members and financial planning clients including SASS, SSS, PSS and Pension members.

Aware Super believes their new name and branding reflects who they are as an organisation, and how they can support and empower their members and clients to succeed by driving better retirement and financial outcomes.

Why do we partner with Aware Super financial planners?

Aware Super financial planners¹ are specialists in public sector schemes, which are some of the most complex superannuation schemes. Their financial planning team has the knowledge and expertise to advise you on your scheme and has been providing advice to members for nearly 30 years.

They will take the time to get to know you and help you understand your scheme choices, maximise your benefits and save tax, and implement a strategy to help you achieve your short, medium and long-term goals.

The financial planning team at Aware Super is committed to helping SASS, SSS, PSS and Pension members and their families, to make informed decisions to maximise their retirement benefit, save tax and plan for a fulfilling retirement.

Aware Super believes... they can support and empower their members and clients to succeed by driving better retirement and financial outcomes.

Our shared history

What does this mean for you?

If you are an existing client of StatePlus, there will be no disruption to the relationship you have with your financial planner or any change to how you will continue to deal with them following the brand change to Aware Super. Your investments won't change, and you will be able to do everything you do now.

The financial planning team at Aware Super will continue to service you and your family with over the phone advice, educational seminars and webinars, such as Retirement Planning and Make the most of your super, and face-to-face meetings.

Talk to the financial planners at Aware Super. The first advice appointment remains free of cost or obligation. Simply call 1800 620 305 to arrange an appointment.

Q: I've recently changed employer and deferred my benefit within SASS. I was told that a large portion of my benefit was protected from the ups and downs of the share market. Now that I've deferred my benefit, is that still the case?

As a deferred member of SASS, your entire benefit is invested in a diverse range of quality investments, and the valuation of these investments less expenses, determines the value of your benefit. This is different to when you were a contributing member and a significant amount of your benefit was a defined benefit, with the value determined by a formula.

So, as a deferred member, it's even more important to review how your money is invested on a regular basis. The Trustee determines how your SANCS (which includes the Basic benefit) is invested through the Trustee selection option and you have responsibility for how your deferred SASS benefit is invested. There are four investment options to choose from - Cash, Conservative, Balanced or Growth, or you can select a combination of all four.

If you have not selected an investment option for your deferred account, then the Trustee will make that decision on your behalf based on your age. Up to age 59, you will be invested in the Growth option and from age 60, you will be invested in the Balanced option.

If you would like some help with selecting the investment option that's right for you, or would like to discuss changing investment options, you can speak to an Aware Super financial planner*.

* Financial planning services are provided by Aware Financial Services Australia Limited, ABN 86 003 742 756 AFSL No. 238430.

Q: I'm 58, have a deferred SASS benefit and I don't have a spouse. I understand that I cannot nominate a beneficiary. Can you please explain what would happen with my deferred benefit if I were to pass away?

The SASS scheme legislation defines that an eligible spouse or de-facto partner* will be entitled to the death benefit.

If a claim is made by more than one eligible person, the Trustee will determine the appropriate distribution. In your situation, where there is no eligible spouse or de-facto partner*, a lump sum death benefit would generally be paid to the legal personal representative/s of your estate.

Generally, the death benefit payable is full entitlements including the lump sum basic benefit. For members who were transferred to SASS from a predecessor fund your death benefit may have additional features such as a reversionary spouse pension.

Although most of us avoid thinking about it, it's important that the scheme can contact your spouse, family member or executor in the event of your death. You can add their contact details to your account by contacting State Super Customer Service. It is preferable that this be provided in writing and the document will be added to your member record.

Go to retire.aware.com.au/statesuper or call 1800 620 305 to speak to a financial planner from Aware Super (previously known as StatePlus).

* An eligible spouse or de facto partner is: a) the widow or widower of the contributor, or b) a person in a registered relationship or interstate registered relationship with the deceased within the meaning of the Relationship Register Act 2010, or c) a person who was in a de facto relationship - within the meaning of the Interpretation Act 1987 - with the deceased at the time of the deceased's death. A de facto partner may be a person of either the opposite sex, or if the deceased dies on or after 19 January 2001, the same sex.

Q: I'm 56 and have left the public health system to work for a private aged care facility. My employer is contributing my SG contributions to my Aware Super account. Should I consolidate all my accounts together including my SASS deferred account?

Once you have reached your earliest retirement age, the withdrawal benefit calculation is no longer applied...

In general, members of defined benefit superannuation funds like SASS need to take extra caution in consolidating their super accounts so that they don't lose any beneficial entitlements within their scheme.

For SASS deferred members, this is particularly important if you have not reached your scheme earliest retirement age, which for most members is 58 although for some members may be 55. If you rollover your benefit before reaching your earliest retirement age, the withdrawal benefit formula is applied to calculate the balance to be rolled over to the nominated super fund. This formula usually results in a rollover amount that is less than if you had continued as a deferred member. In some cases, this can be a significant amount less, so it's important to make an informed decision.

Once you have reached your earliest retirement age, the withdrawal benefit calculation is no longer applied, and the total balance of your deferred account can be rolled over.
